3418	Slasha Surdyke	1/11/2012 19:21	There is absolutely no reason for publishing the age of an actor. All it does is to artificially limit the options of performers and increase the practice of age-discrimination.
3419	Adele Gatis	1/11/2012 19:22	So many actors have a wide age range they can play. Both younger and older, but especially leaning towards the younger age ranges for those passed 40, but there is a huge chance that the people in the casting process who see an actor listed on IMDb will automatically pass them over because of a posted age. IMDb should ask industry professionals if they wish to have their age posted. Let each person choose their own age, as our career and our life, we should have a say in what is given out to the public and industry!!

The case law is against you. Please stop listing precise dates of birth whenever the person objects. Make "opt out" technically simple, and immediately implement the option/choice for anyone who asks for it. Thank you.

3373	Robin Pearson Rose	1/11/2012 15:48	I hate imdb for exactly this reason. Long overdue. Many people look older or younger than they are. Age is irrelevant, it's ability (okay, and appearance vis-a-vis the role if acting -- but including, with makeup!) that counts, in any aspect of the craft. I have been directly affected negatively by my age being posted on IMDb. I too look younger than my posted birthday and have been turned down for auditions before even having a chance to be seen or to read. Before IMDb, age was never discussed. Casting was based on your look and talent. I wholeheartedly support this action and any legislation that leads to the removal of ages from IMDb- age discrimination is illegal, period!

3399	Edoardo Ballerini	1/11/2012 17:42	Have mixed feelings on this issue. Feel that it should be private because I respect choice. But I don't think hiding age from the powers that be in Hollywood is the best defense against ageism. I think ousting the sexists, ageists and racists with progressive thinkers and creators is our future. But I do believe in choice, some can choose to include age and others can choose to hide it...it shouldn't be up to a corporation to decide that. Corporations are pretty much soulless and out to make a buck at struggling artists' expense. If they respected the artists that choose this difficult career path that bring them and their rich families endless entertainment, they would afford us this slight dignity. Thank you for starting this. Is there a snail mail address I can send my donation to?

3588	Renata Gaber	1/20/2012 7:38	In selling anything, a description of the item being sold is required. In the selling of an artist, unfortunately, it is not possible to tell what you are buying by reading a number. Someone who is "too old" for a part may have the freshness and energy that is much better for the project than a younger actor. A movie is a world of imagination, not of fact, or Mary Pickford never would have played Cedric Errol in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" -she would have been twenty years too old and by the way, the wrong sex. Helen Hunt never would have been chosen to play Billy Kwan in "The Year of Living Dangerously" and I would never have gotten the role of Joanne, a transgender who had once been a man, in "Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean". It's time we all of us- IMDb included- came to terms with what we are actually doing here which is making a story to move and enlighten audiences, the criterion for which is who are the best people for the tasks at hand, and definitely not, except in a most homophobic mind, how long the person been alive.

3683	Ananda Chism	1/21/2012 2:18	This has affected my career more than anyone I know. As a marquis-name, 13-year soap actor, my career literally changed the day my age was revealed on IMDB. I was 44 years old playing early 30s and opposite a 26 year-old-love-interest as a contract player on AMC. I looked easily 10 to 12 years younger than my age. Once the press and fans noticed, it became fodder for talk: "Can you believe JEP is 43" There were blogs such as: "He's way to old to be playing opp. that girl." or, "He's had cosmetic surgery to look that young." Once leaving daytime, casting directors who hadn't seen me in years didn't believe I could play 5 or 10 years under my age, because they hadn't seen me, only my name, and many thought my imdb photos were either old or photo-stopped. Therefore, many wouldn't bring me in for roles I was suitable for. I was able to change my age to ten years younger for 6 months. During that time, I got much more activity and new rep meetings went through the roof. Once IMDB caught on to the mistake, they changed the year back to my real age and immediately auditions

3704	Georgia Mills	1/21/2012 3:04	I know for a fact that I have lost opportunities for jobs because my age is displayed. I have walked into casting offices and seen casting directors on IMDB. One time in particular, I had an audition. After looking at IMDB, they called my manager and said "he looks really young but he's too old." My manager asked how did they know how old he was, they said IMDB. So they cancelled my audition. IMDB needs to remove ages. A lot of people on there lie about there ages anyway. They put fake ages on there to get more work and IMDB doesn't verify it.

My boyfriend is a successful producer, and when I pitch someone for a role to him, he immediately checks their age to see if they're right. People who are not actors, don't always have the imagination to age people up or down. And particularly for women, it's a killer. So help us help ourselves! Thank you!

		It's nobody's business how old a film/TV talent is. What matters is their ability to deliver the desired work performance. The Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA), enacted in 1967, serves to protect individuals 40 years of age or older from employment discrimination based on age. Another law protects children from being overworked or otherwise abused in the work place. Since IMDB has de facto become a source for hiring practices it is completely inappropriate, maybe even illegal, for it to post birth dates.	3876 Al Woodley 1/21/2012 17:39	3811 Liz Wilson 1/21/2012 9:13	I have no idea how a piece is chosen to be viewed and listed under your name. The choices are definitely not what I would choose anyone to see if they were booking up my work. How do we get them off and have more control of what goes up there? It's been a real embarrassment to see an episode (my least favorite) from 40 years ago, as if that's representative of me now? Or at least let me choose something I actually liked, who controls this and what can be done? I really want it off there..
		Displaying birthdays are also a violation of the equal employment opportunity laws. It is also a security risk because many credit card companies and social security use birthdays to verify accounts and thieves could gain access to those account with your name and birth date. Unless the individual ask for it, there is no purpose or reason to put the birthday. This is also a violation of privacy. Actor's job should be based on skill, talent and ability without age getting into the mix, even though age shouldn't matter, it matters to the people who hires the actors. If entertainment is a business then this wouldn't happen in other industries. Would anyone care to test that theory? There would be lawsuits flying all over the place. Take the age field out of IMDB or have option not to display.	3877 A.T. Goodwin 1/21/2012 17:47	3812 Dominick Mozees 1/21/2012 9:37

			I pay for service of imdb yet they have been hurting my career for years. I am told almost every day I look 25 or 28. Yet I am 38. Because of that I'm auditioning for roles late 30's to mid 40's! Because casting people see my age on imdb and assume I look 38 and older! I don't even get to audition for late 20's to early or mid 30's anymore. It's cut me out of getting a ton more auditions my opportunity has been made into a tiny window. And I'm never really right for older roles or even the ones for my age. But it's all they'll see me for. It's already a tough business. People should get auditions based on what they can play- not the age on imdb. And even after meeting you they will not get that age out of their head and just assume you are. They don't really look at you. It's hurt me so much already that it might be too late to help my situation, but you never know...	3968	chel santos	1/22/2012 2:11

Our profession is very much based on being hired, based on a "perception" of type/age and not necessarily factual credentials such as how much you know about calculus. Therefore presenting a "real birth date" to the buyers and human resource individuals (aka, Casting Directors) is without question a discriminatory and prejudicial piece of information that is unfair to a professional performer's hiring process and legitimate impartial saleability. we are actors!! it is limiting, puts us in a box please leave the publishing of birthdays and other personal information to the client (actor). Thank you!
I never fully joined IMDB even though I'm listed in several projects on it because of the age listing. It's also privacy invasion!
If I'm paying a fee to imdb, for ImdbPRO, I should have the option to remove my birthdate and age. Unfortunately, age bias exists, and if it harms my ability to be heard, (I'm a screenwriter) I need to have the option to keep my age to myself.
This is a no-no!
the folks at imdb and amazon have no conscience. Please remove EVERYONE'S ages from IMDB. It costs us money. It costs us our living.
Some producers demand to see proof of age (driver's license) for a producer database when you sign your contract on set. This practice should be addressed as well!!!!
remove my birthdate

Age discrimination is just plain wrong! Disclosing age should not be a requirement of the job. If you can do the job and have the credentials to back your knowledge & experience base, that should be good enough.
Please allow for DOB removal.
this is a serious matter, and with all due respect to imdb and its partners, the need and benefit of removing birthdate/age information far outweighs any cost. If any result, a demand for there to be the option to display or not to display. "It is obnoxious that one take public pride in their age unless celebrating great success at the recent spelling bee."
I'd like to help with this cause ANY WAY I can. I'm an actor turned feature film producer who has been desperately trying to get my birth year just hidden from sight on imdb. I have emailed them numerous times about this, all to no avail. Please let me know if there's anything else I can do (818) 470 8106. -- Mark

SAG Capped Session Earnings by Gender and Age

Prepared by the SAG Research & Economics Department

November 2011

Earnings data for work performed under SAG contracts illustrates the impact that age and gender play in the ability of actors to earn a living. The below chart illustrates total session earnings for all performers working under SAG contracts in 2010 (subject to the Pension & Health Caps¹). Male actors on a whole are paid substantially more than female actors, and actors on a whole are paid less after reaching certain age ranges. The impact of age on earnings is particularly severe with women. While male actors between the ages of 41 and 50 represent the segment with the greatest earning potential, female actresses experience a drop-off in total earnings after the age of 40. While a majority capped session earnings earned by men are earned by those over the age of 40 (56%), only 37% of all capped session earnings earned by women are earned by those over 40.

¹ Earnings amounts include all earnings under the respective contracts that were reported to the SAG-P Pension & Health Plans. These earnings are limited by the ceilings set forth in the Codified Basic Agreement and the Television Agreement. These earnings ceilings are as follows:

Theatrical Contract Earnings Ceilings:

- $200,000 per picture (prior to July 2005)
- $232,000 per picture (since July 2005)

Television Contract Earnings Ceilings:

- $15,000 per half-hour picture
- $24,500 per one-hour picture
- $33,000 per one and one-half hour picture
- $40,000 per two hour (or more) picture (except multi-part, closed-end pictures exceeding 3 hours in length)

Earnings under the other contracts are not capped by a P&H ceiling.

EXCLUSIVE: Battle Raging Over Age Listings on IMDb

Published: June 16, 2010 @ 3:46 pm

EXCLUSIVE

(Updated: 4:23 PM, 06/17/10) One of the biggest movie sites in the world, IMDb.com, is facing a hornet's nest of controversy over its policy of publishing the ages of actors and writers who say it leads to ageism, TheWrap has learned.

The Writers Guild of America, West, is leading an effort to convince the massive database -- used by virtually everyone in Hollywood and far beyond -- to permit people to remove their birth dates from the site.

"The Guild has a contract with IMDb to provide credits information and does not release information on age," Neal Sacharow, a spokesperson for the WGA, told TheWrap. "We have raised our concerns with IMDb about its listing of ages."

Representatives from Hollywood guilds including the Screen Actors Guild have reached out to the site to see about taking down the birth dates of people who are not movie stars like Angelina Jolie or Leonardo DiCaprio, according to an individual knowledgeable about the talks. (A spokeswoman for SAG declined to comment.)

The guilds argue that not just writers and actors, but also below-the-line workers as they crest 40 face fewer job opportunities in a business that tends to prefer 25 year olds. Listing their ages publicly is exacerbating the situation, they say.

But IMDb isn't eager to make the change, according to people knowledgeable about the disagreement.

Part of the issue seems to be a cultural one. IMDb comes from internet culture, which is data-focused and oriented to revealing everything imaginable (though not from a corporate perspective -- just try to find a phone number for Google). Meanwhile, veterans of the entertainment industry are not particularly tech-savvy and often fearful of the reveal-all nature of the web.

(Update: Giving credence to claims that it is notoriously difficult to amend or remove personal information on IMDb, a television producer and entertainment agent both contacted TheWrap after this article was published to relay their own difficulties convincing the database to edit profiles.

The producer said that the age listed on their profile was incorrect, but that the site had not responded to an email asking them to remove that information, as well as a personal email address. The producer had even considered retaining a lawyer to try to pressure IMDb to take down the information

"I could never get anybody on the phone," the producer told TheWrap. "It doesn't seem fair that some profiles don't have this information. Why do I want people to see where I was born."

The agent said that two clients had incorrect ages listed on their profiles and had similar problems trying to get IMDb to amend their information. In the case of one of client, who was listed as being eight years older than he actually was, not even photocopies of a birth certificate and passport were sufficient to compel the database to change the listed age. The agent said that having a client listed as 38 when he was actually 30 likely impaired his ability to get work.

"They're very fickle about what changes they do make," the agent told TheWrap. "I don't know were they get their information, but once its up there, God help you.")

Another part of the tension comes from the nature of IMDb itself. Co-founder Col Needham believes the site has a responsibility to provide factual and comprehensive data, according to one source knowledgeable about the company (yes, his birthday is listed ^[4]).

In most cases, individuals or their publicists provide the biographical data for profiles, much as they would with a Facebook account, but average users also can update the information on individuals if, for example, it gets reported in a newspaper or magazine.

To be sure, many profiles do not list birth dates. But once any information is listed, IMDb will only remove it if it is inaccurate, an IMDb spokesperson confirmed to TheWrap. In the case of birth dates, a person would have to actually prove the listed date is inaccurate.

"IMDb is committed to being the most comprehensive source of film, TV and celebrity information," an IMDb spokesperson told TheWrap. "Customers of IMDb trust that when they use our website, they are receiving comprehensive and accurate biographical information. When we are made aware of information that can be verified as inaccurate, we remove from IMDb, as nothing is more important to us than customer trust."

Others say it is near impossible to remove or change a date on IMDb, even if it's false.

The guilds are hoping pressure from them will convince the site -- and Needham -- to re-examine its rules.

IMDb has been conducting a series of industry sessions that have included conversations about the impact that listing ages has on getting work.

The site may be softening its position, but for now both the guilds and IMDb are remaining tight-lipped about their negotiations.

A spokesperson for the Screen Actors Guild declined to comment. A spokesperson for the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Moving Picture Technicians, Artists and Allied Crafts of the United States (IATSE) said that organization was more concerned with issues related to health care and pensions and doubted that anyone hiring a grip or production crew member would make a decision based on an IMDb profile.

The Directors Guild of America has not been involved in the talks, but a spokesperson for the guild declined to comment.

It is no surprise that the writers' union is the most upset over potential age discrimination, people in the film and television business say. A massive age discrimination lawsuit ^[5] filed on behalf of 165 television scribes ensnared 17 major television networks and studios and seven talent agencies for nearly 10 years. That ended in a $70 million settlement last January.

Paul Levine, a writer on "J.A.G." and a producer on the Supreme Court drama "First Monday," said that being in his fifties and sixties was a competitive disadvantage when he tried to find work in the industry.

"Not that anything ever overt was said, but not one time was I interviewed by my someone my own age. I was always interviewed by people 20 to 30 years younger," Levine told TheWrap. "It could be a problem if a show runner or his or her first lieutenant has scripts piling up, and they were trying to figure out who to interview. Looking at a credit list, if one writer is 35 and the other is 52, they're going for the 35 year old."

A lot of that has to do with the audience that movies and television shows are trying to reach, namely teenage boys.

"Of course there's ageism in Hollywood. In what business isn't there," Howard Suber, professor of film history at UCLA and the author of "The Power of Film," told TheWrap. "It's hard for somebody who is 50 to write convincingly about 16 or 17 year olds -- at least contemporary 16 or 17 year olds."

But that's a generation gap that won't be narrowed by obfuscating a writer or a director's true age, Suber argues.

"Who are you kidding?" Suber said. "If you have to take a meeting in order to get hired, don't you think those young people who are interviewing you are going to have a pretty good idea of your age no matter how you try to disguise it?"

IMDb attracts an estimated 60 million unique visits per month.

TV Writers' Age Discrimination Suit Settles for $70M

Published: January 22, 2010 1:00 pm

A massive age discrimination lawsuit that ensnared 17 major television networks and studios and seven talent agencies for nearly 10 years reached a $70 million settlement on Friday.

Over 165 television writers -- all over 40 years old -- alleged that networks, production companies, and talent agencies refused to hire or represent them because of overt age bias.

Among the big players named in the suit were networks such as ABC, CBS, FOX and NBC; talent agencies that include the Endeavor Agency (now William Morris Endeavor), the Persh Agency and Paradigm Talent Literary Agency; and production companies like Carsey-Werner and Pelling Television.

There was one holdout, however. The Creative Artists Agency (CAA) declined to enter into the settlement.

The suits enumerated violations of the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, and the Labor Management Relations Act.

Also named initially in the suit, talent agency ICM agreed to a separate $4.5 million settlement with the plaintiffs in August 2008.

Friday's settlement is subject to final approval by the California Superior Court. This can take a while. For instance, the agreement with ICM had to clear several hurdles over a period of nearly a year before claimants ever saw any money.

According to the terms of the settlement, the writers won't receive a set share. Instead, class members will apply to a fund, named the Fund for the Future, which will be governed by a board composed of settlement class members. The fund will issue grants and loans for approved projects on a competitive basis.

Two-thirds of the $70 million will be paid by insurance carriers.

Speak for all class counsel in recommending that all settlement class members accept the settlement. We are honored to represent a distinguished and talented group of clients and class members," said Paul Prenger of Prenger Lang in Washington, D.C., lead counsel for the defendants, in a statement.

Lawyers for defendants sought to portray Friday's announcement as less an acknowledgement of the validity of the plaintiffs' claims than a shared desire by the studios, networks and agencies named in the suit to close the door on years of costly litigation.

We were fully prepared to oppose class certification and would have prevailed at trial if necessary," Beth A. Pierce, of Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP, Defendants' liaison counsel, said in a statement. But with years of disruptive litigation remaining, and all networks and major television studios and talent agencies participating in the settlement, it made sense to bring these protracted cases to a close.

Defendants were represented by, among others, the law firms of Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP, Epstein Turner Long, P.C., Laser, Eil, Link, Jacobs, Howard Shapiro, LLP, Daye Choler LLP, Judith Walkow Shapiro, P.C., Morgan Lewis Bockius LLP, Munger, Tolles & Olsen LLP, Murchison Cummings LLP, Paul Hastings Tanofsky Walker LLP, and Proskauer Rose LLP.

Prenger, who made the announcement jointly with the defendants, is no stranger to showy class action suits. Another case he litigated served as the basis for the 2005 Charlize Theron drama North Country.
